

Alternative protein sources for laying hens

The Queensland Poultry Research and Development Ce

1 March 2021 D. Robinson Feeding & Nutrition diet, laying hens, agricultural sustainability, bean, chick pea, economic sustainability, feedstuffs, legume, poultry industry, protein, soy bean, vegetable

The need to expand the protein options available to the poultry industry was the catalyst for this study.

The need to expand the protein options available to the poultry industry was the catalyst for this study. The increasing worldwide demand for chicken, particularly in developing countries, will mean that the poultry industry will need to come up with agriculturally and economically sustainable feedstuffs that will provide chickens with protein.