

Effects of phasing out caged farming in Europe

Publication: 26 August 2019
Researchers: Jessica Spencer
Categories: Animal Welfare
Tags: free range, welfare, cage

This project investigated egg production in Germany, the Netherlands and the UK, where conventional cage systems for laying hens are no longer permitted. The report gives an overview of some of the systems and equipment in use; their set-up and cost, and flock management practices in place.

This project investigated egg production in Germany, the Netherlands and the UK, where conventional cage systems for laying hens are no longer permitted. The report gives an overview of the systems and equipment in use; their set-up and cost, and flock management practices in use.