

Hindgut function in laying hens

Organisation: University of Newcastle, Callaghan

Publication: 1 September 2001

Researchers: R. Taylor

Categories: Biosecurity & Flock Health

Tags: commercial feed, cereal, enzyme, fermentative acidosis, grain, hindgut, livestock

This report details a series of experiments designed to provide evidence of a fermentative acidosis caused in the hindgut gut of layer-type birds after changes in their diet, and the development of a commercial feed enzyme.

This report details a series of experiments designed to provide evidence of a fermentative acidosis caused in the hindgut gut of layer-type birds after changes in their diet, and the development of a commercial feed enzyme.