

Infectious Bursal Disease Virus

Organisation: CSIRO Division of Animal Health

Publication: 1 November 1997

Researchers: J. Ignjatovic and S. Prowse

Categories: Biosecurity & Flock Health

Tags: strains, vaccine, chickens, challenge, analysis, antibody, antigenicity, broiler feeder, infectious bursal disease virus, local, pathogenicity, titres, variants

The project was initiated in response to reports in 1995 that a more severe strain of IBDV was presenting in Victoria and NSW.

The project was initiated in response to reports in 1995 that a more severe strain of IBDV was presenting in Victoria and NSW. The study aims to characterise these strains, to compare local IBDV strains with those of other countries, and to determine whether current vaccines provide protection against the recently identified aggressive strains.