

Marek's disease research in Australia - a review

Organisation: RMIT University Department of Biotechnology & Environmental Biology

Publication: 1 March 2004

Researchers: K. M. Gilmore and G. A. Tannock

Categories: Biosecurity & Flock Health

Tags: pathogen, attenuation, Maravac, Marek's disease, vaccine

This project is part of a series of trials to evaluate the efficacy of existing vaccines against a particularly virulent strain of Marek's disease which presented in the early 1990's.

This project is part of a series of trials to evaluate the efficacy of existing vaccines against a particularly virulent strain of Marek's disease which presented in the early 1990's.